

You've got a friend in you: The science of helpful microbes

5/26/2017 1:30:00 PM

1 Hour

Science

North 132A

Despite their bad reputation, bacteria, viruses, and parasites don't only make people sick. In fact, there are many microscopic organisms that are actually beneficial. Experts discuss ways microbes make us healthy.

Teachers will be exposed to the myths about microbial organisms and the truths about the those myths. They will also learn about the various uses of the microbials that they can talk about when teach about them.

Brandon Favre, University student studying Molecular Biosciences and Biotechnology, Biodesign Institute, Arizona State University

Bradley Lusk, Doctorate Degree, Biological Design, Founder and Blogger for ScienceTheEarth.com

Galyna Kufryk, Graduate Degree, Microbiology and Virology, Grand Canyon University

Thiago Stangherlin Barbosa, Graduate Student, Environmental Biotechnology, Biodesign Institute, Arizona State University

