

E(xoplanet)Harmony: Looking for a World to Fall in Love With

5/27/2017 3:00:00 PM

1 Hour

Science

North 131C

Earlier this year scientists announced the discovery of several new planets, many of which were located within the "habitable zone". Scientists discuss the habitable zone, and what qualities in a planet makes it one that might be friendly for life.

Teachers will learn about the what the habitable zone is and why it is a popular topic, and what it takes for a planet to become a life friendly planet.

Alma Ruiz-Velasco, Graduate Degree, Radioastronomy, Interferometry, Lowell Observatory

Gerard van Belle, Graduate Degree, Astrophysics, Lowell Observatory

Annie Wargetz, Graduate Degree, Human Spaceflight, Osiris-REX, University of Arizona

Dean Frias, Graduate Degree, Science Communication, Oceanography, Ecology, School of Earth and Space Exploration, Arizona State University, Sea Life Arizona